EVERYBODY HAS ANOTHER GUESS

It is often the case that the simplest thing in the world, at first sight, contains, after being analyzed, most valuable information; or if not information, instructive points that not appearing on the face, give to the whole a valuable appearance.

The B. A. P. prize puzzle on page six of this paper is a most simple, inoffensive looking article and is, in fact, very easy to solve. Perhaps its very simplicity may make it seem harder. The guesses already sent in to B. A. P. are nearly all good but it is noticeable that improvement is steadily taking place.

New answers received this morning particularly some from those who have guessed before are growing better and nearer to the point. Let every one guess again—keep hammering—and try for the prize. It is worth time to make a try.

EXCHANGE MEETING

There will be a meeting of the Builders and Traders' Exchange in headquarters at 7:45 o'clock Thursday, October 15. Plans for pressing the Exchange petition to Congress will be discussed. Subjects for discussion will be as follows:

1. Are there any trade abuses the Exchange can remedy?

2. Should the government call for tenders for supplies or work when appropriations are possibly not available?

This is the regular monthly meeting and every member is expected to be present.

TESTING ALARM SYSTEM.

One whistle and after an interval one more, followed later by three rapid blasts from the fire whistle set people to wondering at about 9:30 o'clock this morning what manner of signal it was being attempted to give. It was learned that Chief Thurston was simply testing the wires to see that all was well, thinking that the prevailing storm may have done some damage. Everything was found in good working order.
